Haunted Golf Courses

A 3-foot putt for par is scary; so is an approach to a green surrounded by hazards. Now imagine trying to hit those shots with the possibility of ghosts watching. Some golf courses around the world are thought to be haunted because of nearby graveyards or murders and deaths that have occurred at the golf course's location.

Haunted Golf Courses

Trails West Golf Course: Fort Leavenworth, Kansas is home to Trails West Golf Course; some people have said they have spotted a lady wandering the grounds. That lady is thought to be the ghost of Catherine Sutter, whose family disappeared while traveling west. She died soon after and is thought to still be looking for her family.

St. Andrews Old Course: Everyone is well aware of the rich golfing history that comes from St. Andrews, Scotland. But not everyone knows that it could possibly be haunted. Behind the 18th green there is a monument that honors five Protestant martyrs who were burned at the stake on that spot in the 15th and 16th centuries. Also, the golfing legend himself, Old Tom Morris, died falling down a flight of stairs in the clubhouse.
